

ILLINOIS EDITOR TELLS HIS PAPER OF HAWAII LIFE

E. M. Botsford Has Found Heaven in Honolulu and Taken Cottage There

THIS IS JUST LIKE FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Carnival Was Hilarious, Music Is Charming, Volcano Wonderful and Everything Delightful

At the request of the editorial staff of the Quincy (Ill.) Daily Herald, writing from Honolulu to his paper, has the following to say about Hawaii and his sojourn in the Paradise of the Pacific: "I have found heaven and taken a cottage there. Some of my carping contemporaries and puffed political opponents may emit a snorting sneer at the idea of my having qualified by morals and virtues for any sort of celestial stories. Whatever may come hereafter, I know that here and now I am in heaven. While it is coming to be realized that the spiritual heaven is within a man and he can make it or break it himself, still I must maintain that in all the marvelous material delights of climate and scenery and mountains, and sea and flower and foliage and balmy breezes and tonic ozone, this region has every other section of God's footstool surpassed."

He supposed that southern California was about as near paradise as one could get on this globe. But, bless you, it is 2100 miles from it, and over its rough, restless and oftentimes retching ocean. But once here and all the miseries that have assailed the pit of your stomach for five days are fully atoned for by the inexpressible superabundance of this ideal spot.

Mark Twain's Praise
"Here is what Mark Twain said of it."

"Hawaii, the loveliest spot of island that lies anchored in any ocean. We sleep and in all the world has no deeper, stronger charm for me but that one; no other land could so longingly and homelike haunt me sleeping and waking, through half a lifetime, as that one has done. Other things leave me, but it abides; other things change, but it remains the same. For me its balmy airs are always blowing, its summer suns are always shining, its pulses are always beating, its life is always pulsing, its softest breeze is always blowing, its garlanded crags, its leaping cascades, its plumed palms drooping by the shore; its remote summits floating like islands above the cloud-rail; I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitude; I can hear the plash of its brooks; in its noisels still lives the breath of flowers that perished twenty years ago."

Mark Twain has expressed my sentiments almost exactly as I could have done. But he can't beat my enthusiasm, and I can't bottle it. Like Foreign Land
"Briefly speaking, this is just like a foreign land. One does not have to go to China, or Japan, or Portugal, or France. We have all the atmosphere and environments and people right here. They have their quarters, but they swarm the city all dressed completely in their native and unique costumes (see any encyclopedia). But thank heaven, they are all under the stars and stripes. Of the 70,000 or more residents only about 8000 are white. But besides this number 12,000 of Uncle Sam's soldiers keep things lively night and day, and I fear we are whitening out the blood of these Mongolians and Orientals and other shady confessions at the rate of a mile. But he will have largely destroyed the picturesque of the passing throngs."

Then there are a dozen big German vessels in refuge, dismantled and disarmed and stuck in the Honolulu harbor until the war is over. The hundreds of German sailors and marines add to the variegated throng and have nothing to do but enjoy themselves and the effectiveness of the island. One day, after the native and unique costumes (see any encyclopedia). But thank heaven, they are all under the stars and stripes. Of the 70,000 or more residents only about 8000 are white. But besides this number 12,000 of Uncle Sam's soldiers keep things lively night and day, and I fear we are whitening out the blood of these Mongolians and Orientals and other shady confessions at the rate of a mile. But he will have largely destroyed the picturesque of the passing throngs."

Taken Cottage at Beach
"We had expected to merely make a two weeks' trip, coming from Los Angeles on the big new steamer Great Northern, which had just come, the first big passenger boat, through the Panama Canal. One day of this air-sea and cosmopolitan delights set us down. We hastily packed our trunks and loaded in a cottage at Seaside Hotel for a month. The cottage has just been built two weeks, and has every convenience, as modern and complete as one could get at home. We saw right out onto the beach and into billowy waters that keep an even temperature of seventy-six the year around. Never under seventy-four. The thermometer inland here never goes down to below fifty-five or above eighty-five while day and night out its range is sixty-five to seventy-eight. We were very fortunate to leave ship here. The next day, on the trip to visit the active volcano in the island of Hawaii at Hilo, two ladies who had been with us all the way were killed by an overturning auto-bus on the mountain. The bodies were embalmed and taken back to Los Angeles. But it must have cost a pal over the five days' return trip, and from a pleasure voyage it was converted into a funeral ship."

Hilarious Carnival Week
"This has been a hilarious and glorious week in Honolulu. The entire week has been devoted to the Mid-Pacific Carnival. Something

WILL DOUBLE GUARD ON MAUI

Troop of Cavalry At Makawao Is Included Among Plans Being Discussed

If the plans of the regular army and National Guard officers are realized, Maui will soon have a complete battalion of cavalry soldiers, including a troop of cavalry at Makawao, reports the Maui News. This will mean that instead of the two companies on the island as at present, there will be five, including the cavalry troop.

One of the two companies on the island as at present, there will be five, including the cavalry troop. The cavalry contingent, with headquarters at Makawao, will be made up of young men of Makawao and Kula, who can supply their own horses.

Local officers of the National Guard express the conviction that there is ample material available for the proposed increase of the local militia, and there will be no difficulty in organizing them, especially so since there will probably be earnest co-operation on the part of most of the employers of the young men to be recruited.

Record Attendance by Company I
While Lieutenant Walters would not comment on the relative efficiency of the Maui companies as compared with others of the guard, pending the appearance of his official report, it is believed that a very creditable showing was made. In the matter of attendance, Company I, of Wailuku, despite the fact that her men come from all over central Maui, broke the attendance record of the islands, with 84 out of 90 strength of 100 answering the roll call.

Rifle Butts Soon
According to Captain Knae, of Company I, the long hoped for target range for his company is likely soon to be an actuality. The survey of the site has recently been made by County Engineer Howell, and the lease is now being prepared by County Attorney Cane. As soon as this is completed, the lease from the Wailuku Sugar Company will be executed, and within a week or two at most the butts will be in place and ready for use.

GUNBOAT SMITH GETS THE SHADE OVER REED

NEW YORK, March 28.—Gunboat Smith, one-time heavyweight white hope, got back some of his lost reputation here Saturday night by outpointing Joe Reed after ten rounds of different milling.

unusual doing all the time, with the Chinese, Japanese, Koreans and Hawaiians in the foreground with pagodas and parades and floral processions and exhibits.
"And music! I never knew what it meant to have the entire atmosphere impregnated with harmony and melody. There are a dozen big army bands, one of them playing nearly all the time, and sometimes altogether in a vastness and mammothness of melody that almost shakes the coral at the bottom of this island of Oahu. Then the Hawaiians are all natural musicians, and wherever you go their orchestras of stringed instruments, some novel to us, are heard, and their voices blending in the weird native songs."

"We took a ninety-five-mile auto ride around the island and were given a Hawaiian luau, or luncheon, under a bower roofed with palm leaves and sugar cane, while a Hawaiian orchestra played continually new and deliciously unique airs."

Tells About Big Feast
"The feast we could not stomach, but we had the rare experience of raw fish, greasy pig roasted and wrapped in native leaves dipped in oil and tied with live plant stems, chicken reeling in the greasiest gravy that ever oozed from a fat fowl, with cooked taro root on the side (a native grain like oatmeal), and finally the great Hawaiian dish, poi. This is a big bowl of starchy substance that tastes like glue and looks worst. The whole meal was eaten with the fingers, no eating implements being on the table."

"Friday night there was a water carnival and pyrotechnics. All the shipping in the harbor was ablaze with electric lights and Japanese and Chinese lanterns passing around and around the big bay, while bands played and 50,000 on the piers applauded to the echo. And then we had a view of the eruption of a volcano on the edge of the city. It was most realistic and beautiful."
News of World Received
"In Honolulu there are two daily papers published in English, one morning and one evening. There are several high-class weeklies in Hawaiian. There are four Japanese dailies, a Chinese daily, besides different weekly and semi-weekly Chinese and Portuguese papers."

SOLDIERS CAUGHT NEAR NUUANU DAM

Three Prisoners Who Broke Jail At Fort Ruger Rounded Up By Post Detail

Three general prisoners who escaped early Thursday morning from the temporary penitentiary at Fort Ruger were rounded up yesterday afternoon by a detail of soldiers sent out to hunt for them in the neighborhood of the Nuuanu dam. Their liberty lasted a little less than forty hours.

Being without money, or provisions they had held up a Chinese and robbed him of several dollars, as he was plodding along the Nuuanu drive. The three prisoners are Felix Sizemore, William H. Harding and Albert Ditt. They offered no resistance when they knew they had been sighted and were covered by the soldiers' rifles.

CHEST OF SILVER FOR POPULAR COUPLE

Colts McLennan, who has been manager of the Lamson-Sugar Company for more than twenty years, has, in consequence of failing eyesight, decided to leave Hawaii and settle in British Columbia.

Besides being a keen agriculturist, devoted to the interests of the company he managed, which is situated in the rainy belt of Hawaii, Mr. and Mrs. McLennan have gained an enviable reputation for open-hearted hospitality at their beautiful home at Papahāna.

On the twenty-third instant Mr. and Mrs. McLennan were the recipients of a very handsome chest of table silverware, which was supplied by Wichman & Co. of Honolulu, and bears the following inscription:

Presented by the Employees of the Lamson-Sugar Company, Papahāna, to Mr. and Mrs. C. McLennan, on the occasion of his retiring from the position of Manager of the Company, March 28, 1915.
The committee, who had charge of the arrangements consisted of Mrs. R. H. Hurlburt, W. H. Crozier, Jas. Thompson, U. Yamamoto and A. Duncan, secretary. The presentation was made by J. Hay Wilson, the company's accountant, and was suitably acknowledged by Mr. McLennan.

HONOLULU NURSES ON FIRING LINE

Letter Come From Casualty Clearing Station, Five Miles Behind New Zealanders

From an advance hospital, known as No. 3 Casualty Clearing Station, five miles behind the British trenches on the Belgian border, close in the rear of the New Zealanders, and from the stately home of Lord Onslow, Clendon Park, in Surrey, now a hospital for wounded men, come letters to Honolulu with news of the four Red Cross nurses who went from this city to the front.

Miss Jordan and Miss Craig are together on the Continent, in the thick of the first-aid work behind the firing line. Miss Gray is at the temporary hospital at Clendon Park, Surrey, where there were, when she wrote, one hundred and twenty patients. Miss Hunter is on duty at Brighton, where the British wounded are taken.

In a letter to a Honolulu friend, Miss Craig writes:
"Just a line to let you know Miss Jordan and I are here, very fit and happy to be sent so far up. We have been told we are about five miles from the trenches. In any case, we get men direct from the trenches. Poor fellows, they are pretty uncomfortable. The weather has been bad, but not cold. This has been a wonderful experience, and I would not have missed these months over here for anything."
Miss Jordan writes:
"Picture me in a tiny room in a convent, a stone floor and no fire, sitting in my greatest coat with my feet upon a chair to keep them off the floor. It is much colder than charity or anything else I ever heard of. The little room is single we mean, and truly it is the table—a mess. We are quite fortunate to have it."
"We are allotted on the townspeople and have our meals together in this room."
"We are at No. 3 Casualty Clearing Station. These stations are at intervals all along the line, and are where the men are brought direct from the front, and where they are treated until they are wounded."

"Nobody who has not seen the poor fellows as we see them, wet, cold, and all our previous conception of what could be, and with such terrible wounds—some, of course, are not so bad, thank goodness—can have any idea of what modern warfare really is. It is indescribably frightful."
Bryce Tommy Atkins
"The men are cheerful beyond all hope, and I take off my hat to Tommy Atkins with respect and admiration. They are always so anxious to point out one who is a bit worse than themselves. One man, who had been wounded in both arms, one leg, chin, ear and head, said quite cheerfully to the doctor, 'I think I tried to stop too many things, sir,' and when the next man to him groaned he said: 'Buck up, old boys, we are pretty jolly lucky to be here.'"
"There is so much of that spirit, and with the small amount of breath they have they will sit up and smoke a cigarette or play a month organ."

"I do hope the war will soon end. It is too terrible for words. Since we came to France we have not heard much news and do not see many papers. Though we see the men from the front, they don't know as much as we do, they occasionally see a newspaper. They know what happens in their own corner, and no more."
"It is bitterly cold. We had quite a snowfall two days ago and had to wear gum boots on duty. The mud is awful. We are billeted in the middle of a street; the mess room is at one end and the hospital at the other, so we have quite a little walking to do."

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES MAY ENGAGE IN PRIVATE PRACTISE

On Recommendation of House Judiciary Committee Crawford's Bill Is Tabled

ONLY TWO STATES KNOWN TO HAVE LAW ON SUBJECT

Measure Would Inure To Detriment of Efficient Service in the Several Departments

The attorney general of the Territory and his deputies, the city attorney of Honolulu and his deputies, the county attorneys of Hawaii, Maui and Kauai and their respective deputies, the high sheriff and his deputies, the city and respective county attorneys and their deputies, provided they are lawyers, and some are and some are not, may spend their time practicing and acting as counsellors at law for the public in any civil causes instituted in any court within the Territory.

The House committee on the judiciary said on Saturday when it recommended that H. B. 145, introduced by Eli J. Crawford and entitled "An Act prohibiting certain officials of the government from practicing or acting as attorneys or counsellors at law in civil causes during their terms of office," be tabled. The recommendation of the committee, which is headed by Representative William T. Hawkins, was adopted and the bill went to the woodpile. Efforts have been made every two years, almost since the first territorial legislature met in 1901, to prohibit these salaried employees of the government from engaging in private practice. These efforts have been, however, all in vain. The report of the judiciary committee reads as follows:

"The object of this bill is to prevent the attorney general of the Territory and his deputies, the attorney of the city and county of Honolulu and his deputies, the county attorneys of each of the several counties and their deputies, the high sheriff, sheriff and deputy sheriffs throughout the Territory from practicing and acting as attorneys or counsellors at law in any civil causes instituted in any court within the Territory."
"Your committee has made a careful investigation of this matter, with the result that after an examination of the statutes of thirty out of the forty-five States of the Union, the statutes of the remaining fifteen States being only partially available in our supreme court library, and the statutes of two of the States, to wit, Mississippi and South Carolina, being entirely missing, finds that out of the thirty States examined only two have adopted provisions limiting in any degree the right to engage in civil practice on the part of such officials, and these provisions affect only the attorney general of the two States, the States of New Hampshire and Wyoming being the two above mentioned. The statutes of the other twenty-eight States covered by this investigation either contain no provisions limiting the rights of such officials to engage in civil practice, or (as is more commonly the case) affirmatively provide that such officials may not engage in any civil suit depending upon substantially the same facts as in pending criminal prosecutions, thus inferentially authorizing said officials to engage in civil suits not depending upon facts involved in a criminal trial."

"The result of this investigation, as far as data is at hand, has been to affirmatively disclose the fact that no statutory provisions exist limiting county attorneys from accepting civil employment. The usual statutory provisions limiting them from being employed in cases contrary to the public interest only emphasize their right to engage in civil practice in matters not contrary to the public interest. The two exceptions are New Hampshire and Wyoming, which prohibit the attorney general from accepting civil cases, but neither of the States in any way limits the right of any public attorney or prosecutor other than the attorney general in engaging in private civil practice. As far as the attorney general and his deputies are concerned, your committee finds that they are not engaged in private practice, their time being almost entirely taken up with governmental matters."

WOULD BE DETRIMENTAL

"The committee believes, inure to the detriment of efficient service in the offices of the attorneys of the several counties and would prevent the voters from obtaining the services of men as county attorneys who are capable and whom the voters would wish to fill the positions."
"Your judiciary committee therefore, after due and careful consideration of this matter, recommends that the bill be tabled."

EXPLOITS OF SUBMARINE

U-21 TOLD BY OFFICER

BERLIN, March 16.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—The second of Otto von Goettberg's semi-official accounts of the German navy is devoted to the exploits of submarine U-21. He writes:
"On the torpedo tube of the U-21 is now the inscription: 'Through a shot from this tube, on August 9, 1914, the captain sank the English cruiser Pathfinder.' Of this engagement Lieutenant Commander von Goettberg (Iron Cross) said: 'She wanted to enter the Firth of Forth, but I lay across her course and sank her. An English destroyer pursued me, but I naturally took the U-21 under the water, and we escaped safely.'"
Of the recent work of U-21 in the Irish Sea, von Goettberg says: 'Soon after January 26 the boat put to sea. It headed for the vicinity of Liverpool, and sank the Ben Cranchan, loaded with general cargo. While the Ben Cranchan's boats were still in sight the Linda was sunk. Then a coal steamer appeared and Lieutenant-Hersing waited for her, but by this time the wireless had sent an echo of the thunderous explosion on the Ben Cranchan into every office of British shipowners, and Hersing waited in vain for several days for new booty. But John Bull was clever; he had ordered the stoppage of all shipping in the Irish Sea.
"From Liverpool Roy Heringham cruised off into the Irish Sea, bombarding an airship ship as he passed. A neighboring port shelled the little air-tanker, which dived unharmed and proceeded leisurely homeward."
